

Almost Invisible Irene

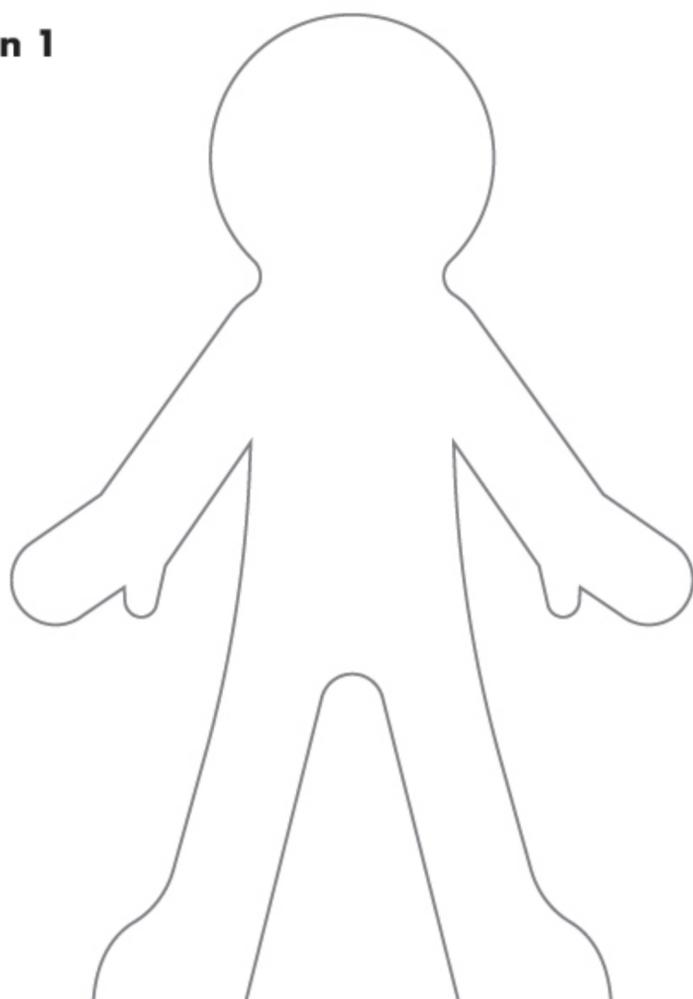

Animals use camouflage to protect themselves by blending into the environment around them. For example, polar bears and snowy owls are all white. They are hard to spot against the snow where they live. Some animals, like the snowshoe hare, even change color with the seasons. In summer, a snowshoe hare is brown. In winter, white!

Invisible You

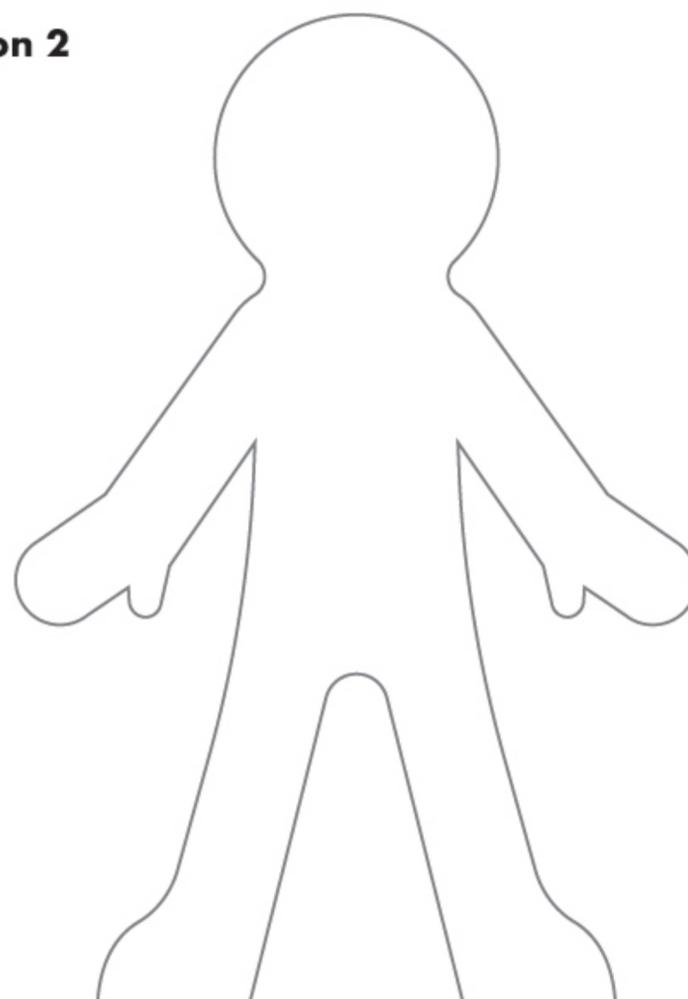

1. Color each of the backgrounds to show a certain environment, such as a city, park, beach, or school.
2. Color in each person to blend in with one of the background environments, as the girl does in the picture to the right.
3. Cut out the people and move them over the background to show how they blend in with their environment.
